FOREWORD

In January, 1837, a resolution of the General Assembly made it the duty of the president and directors of the Literary Fund to submit a plan for a system of common schools in North Carolina, suited to the condition and means of the State. From this beginning developed the present school system, the hundreth anniversary of which is being celebrated this year. The Black and Gold Staff has tried in this book, to pay tribute to North Carolina Education.

SOUTH HIGH SCHOOL CLASS POEM

Pauline Yontz, Class Poet

Now our duties at South are completed,
We must leave every school-mate and friend;
We have failed or succeeded;
It's too late all our wrong acts to mend.

Now that our new life's beginning,
We may prove we can do things worthwhile
By showing we're worthy of winning,
And that all will need is a trial.

May we all learn to serve our nation
At each task whether great, small or new,
And prove we have had education,
And act as South High taught us to.

May we live up to South's expectations,
Keeping love, hope, honor, and trust;
Holding always the high admiration
Of those who have had faith in us!

HISTORY OF JANUARY CLASS, 1937

Ruth Gatewood, Historian

The spring of 1933 marked the beginning of our eventful history. It was during our green young freshman year that we formed the foundation for the happy years that were to follow.

Since our school was a junior high, we were combined with the sixth and seventh grades during our freshman and sophomore year. We did not elect any class officers; however, Doris Davis served as secretary of the student organization. There was also among us others who were destined to become leaders.

As "love sick juniors" we were organized for the first time. In fact we accomplished a great deal of which we were proud. When we elected officers, Doris Davis was chosen to be our president; Anne Fort, secretary; and Jack Styron, treasurer. Many members of our class held outstanding organization jobs. Among them was G. R. Pulliam, who served as the school's president. Although we had many capable workers, we often found ourselves in need of help and advice of Miss Virginia Allen, our sponsor.

We enjoyed many social activities, but the crowning event was when we entertained the first seniors at a pioneer Junior-Senior Banquet.

In sports we were well represented by both the boys and the girls. Cheering and hard fighting pushed our teams to numerous victories.

The only flaw in our happiness was the illness and death of Katherine Burns.

Before we realized it, we reached the first half of our senior year. We were given the senior privileges for which we had been longing. Our first task was to choose our class leaders. Jack Styron was president, Doris Davis, vice president, and Anne Fort, secretary. Again members of our class held prominent positions in organization work. G. R. was re-elected as president of the student body, and Doris Davis served as vice president. We had many good times with Miss Margaret McLean as our sponsor. However, the main issue was work.

When we started on the last mile of our road, there were only twenty-two of us, but we were a very happy group with Miss Daisy Lee Glasgow as our class sponsor. Without her helpful guidance we would never have gotten through the trials of graduation. Indeed, our senior happiness would have been complete but for the loss of one of our number, Virginia Wooters.

Under the leadership of G. R. Pulliam as president, Mildred Carroll, vice president, Helen Willard, secretary, and Jack Styron, treasurer; we worked together successfully.

Doris Davis was president of the student body and president of the Inter-Club Council of Girl Reserves. Also, Anne Fort was vice president of the school. Other members continued to hold positions of importance.

Our social life was certainly not neglected. Mildred Carroll, chairman of the social committee, gave us many good times. We shall never forget the parties Miss Glasgow and Miss Hall gave us, but the acme of entertainment was the Banquet which the Juniors gave us on the Roof Garden of the Robert E. Lee Hotel.

Class day and graduation will always stand out in our memory. We shall never forget the splendid talk which Dr. Ralph A. Herring gave. If ever it is necessary for us to wear caps and gowns again, perhaps we shall know how it should be done.

As the years roll by, our hearts will turn to praise you, dear South High. We shall always remember the things you have taught us and the things for which you stand.

PROPHECY OF JANUARY CLASS, 1937

Anne Fort, Prophet

On a cold January day in 1947 I hurried into the home of Mrs. Pat Patterson (Louise Henderson).

"Come right in," Louise explained "You could never guess what I'm doing. Anne, I'm addressing cards to all the members of the '37 graduating class informing them of the alumni meeting to be held next month."

"How do you find time for so many things, Louise?" I questioned. "I have so much business to handle in my beauty shop, that I can hardly do all that's required of me."

"I imagine the "Ann Art Beauty Shoppe" does keep you busy, but I promised Helen Willard, secretary of the class, I would address these cards for her. She is a buyer for the Silver's Store, Inc., and is on a business trip. I hope she can get back for the reunion."

We settled down to addressing cards, and who should be listed first but the class sponsor, Mrs. Laerski (Miss Daisy Lee Glasgow). The "he" turned out to be not a fake but a reality. However, she couldn't give up her job, for she hoped that she might meet another "gem" (?) like the January Class of 1937.

"I hate to ask G. R. away from his pleasant job, with the Pulliam Undertakers, but we must have him here," Louise said.

Doris Davis "the great debater," was reached by sending a card to Richmond, Virginia where she charms the court with her oratorical ability and beauty. Mildred Carroll receives her card in Richmond, for of course, wherever David is, Jonathan is not far away. Mildred is the head of the Recreation Department of Richmond.

Two cards found their way to New York. There Henry Folsom is the owner of Folsom Ready to Wear Store. The slogan is "Fol'som values up to take home." Wilmoth Money has found a way to use her graceful walk by modeling woman's clothes in Henry's store.

"Pauline Yontz keeps up with all as editor of the Twin Citymite—from the smallest announcement in the society world to the biggest business deal."

"Only yesterday I read that Marshall Bodenheimer had been appointed manager of S. H. Kress and company. Juanita Cline, who was floorlady in the store here, has been transferred to the Greensboro store."

On the society page appeared the announcement Miss Beatrice Markland had been "quietly" married to Mr. K. Everhart.

"My goodness," I thought, "think of Beatrice doing anything quietly!"

Addressed to the Twin City Day Nursery one card reached Ruth Gatewood, the friend of children. Two youngsters who stay there are packed off to bed early every night with a promise from their mother, Mrs. Scott (Elizabeth Crow) that when they are high school seniors they can stay up as late as they wish.

The city library received two cards—the ones to Opal Brown and Louise Nifong. Miss Baity has trained them so well that they are very efficient librarians especially in helping students find material for Mrs. Laerski's history assignments.

"The Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D. C. " two cards read. There Jack Styron and his orchestra furnish dinner music with Virginia Brock, as soloist.

One card went to a young lady who has a perfect right to hold men's hands. At the John Hopkins Institute in Baltimore, Maryland, Virginia Easter, performs her duties.

Frances Perryman and Frances Pegram were reached at the Wachovia Bank. They have proved to be valuable stenographers in that business.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF JANUARY CLASS

We, the January Class of 1937 do hereby bequeth our worthwhile abilities to our fortunate successors.

Article I

- Item I. To the faculty who have helped us often we leave many pleasant memories.
- Item II. To the Student Organization we leave best wishes to put everything over in regular "South Style".
- Item III. To the future senior class sponsors, Miss Daisy Lee Glasgow leaves the honor of not having to listen when teachers' meetings are held to discuss elective sheets.

Article II

- Item I. To the Junior Boys the Senior Boys leave "their" tuxedos, if they can get them together.
- Item II. To the Junior Girls the Senior Girls leave hopes that there will be one boy apiece to take them places.
- Item III. To the football team, we leave Reid Holder's and Henry Folsom's good sportsmanship and good playing with our sincere wishes that they will win every game next year and the years to come.
- Item IV. To the I. B. S. and the cheerleaders, the Seniors leave their hopes, their lusty cheering, and loyal support.

Article III

- Item I. To soft voiced Helen Lewis, Anne Fort leaves her loud voice which can easily be heard any time, anywhere.
- Item II. To the girl who dares to try, Louise Henderson leaves her seat in the LaSalle.
- Item III. To the future Junior Class Leader of Songs, Beatrice Markland leaves ability to get a harmonizing tune without a harmonica.
- Item IV. To Louise Ervin, Helen Willard leaves her dramatic ability with a shy wish that she will use it properly.
- Item V. To the future class treasurer, Jack Styron leaves his deep pockets, memorandum book, and most accurate ability to miscount money and to make unbalanced financial statements.

- Item VI. To Lela Gatewood, Juanita Cline leaves her recently acquired ability to write letters of adjustment that will be acceptable to Miss Potter.
- Item VII. To Ruby Carroll, Frances Pegram leaves her desire to be a beautician in hopes that some day Ruby can wave Greta Garbo's hair.
- Item VIII. To J. M. Hall, Marshall Bodenhimer wills his excellent memory of history dates, places, and things.
- Item IX. To Richard Orrell, Henry Folsom leaves his winning way with the feminine race along with that ever present smile.
- Item X. To the future Journalism Classes, Pauline Yontz leaves her poetic ability, dependability, and helpfulness.
- Item XI. To Carrie Donnell, Ruth Gatewood leaves her humorous character.
- Item XII. To Virginia Sprinkle, Opal Brown leaves her silly giggle with regrets that such a clever thing must be left behind.
- Item XIII. To Jimmie Whitlow, Reid Holder leaves his witticism in hopes that Jimmie will be rewarded with as many laughs.
- Item XIV. To Paul Ledbetter, G. R. Pulliam leaves his quiet and dignified way.
- Item XV. To Audrey James, Louise Nifong leaves her gray hairs.
- Item XVI. To Doris Highsmith, Elizabeth Crow wills her rags and buckets used for keeping the senior home room clean.
- Item XVII. To Doris Bell, Wilmoth Money leaves her slim features and graceful walk.
- Item XVIII. To Jack Brown, Virginia Brock leaves her high degree of speed in typing, in hopes that he will make his speed.

CLASS POEM OF JUNE CLASS

Annie Jarvis, Class Poet

Laughters:

A laugh is just like sunshine,
It brightens every day;
It tips the peak of life with light,
And drives the clouds away.

Knowledge:

When unknown problems face us,
Let knowledge answer loud,
For knowledge is a priceless gift
That makes our living proud.

Thought:

A thought before beginning
The morn of every day;
Will help us o'er the rocky parts,
Along life's hard pathway.

Remembrance:

A pause—as we look back at school,
When we sailed away from shore;
With tear-dimmed eyes we wonder
What the future has in store.

Hope:

When cherished goals defy us,
Let's not be depressed;
Without these things to try us,
Life would lose its zest.

Not what we seem, but what we do,
Not what we dream, but what is true;
These are the goals that shine like gems
Bright stars in fortune's diadem!

HISTORY OF JUNE CLASS, 1937

Everette Charles, Historian

In September, 1933, South Junior High School had so many freshmen that the other students (and ourselves most of all, we thought) were crowded. As we think of ourselves, as we were four years ago, it seems that everyone of us was an aviator. (Boy! you should have seen us "fly" through the halls after having marched in line for seven long years!) Since the word aviator seems to have described us, let us say that we were only student pilots at first. We began our study (not flying, but honest to goodness work) with Mr. J. M. Shields, as our principal. Just as all other high school students have done, we did not realize what a fine faculty we had and how much we really liked them in spite of the difficult homework which they seldom failed to assign.

Our first two years of high school are like a puzzle that can't be solved. We were divided among the twenty home rooms of the school without any relationship whatsoever as freshmen or sophomores. We did not even know each other's name. We are proud of the fact, however, that fifty members of graduation class served at least one term during his high school career as one or more of the "big four" officers of his class. It was during this lapse of time that our principal, Mr. Shields, retired in favor of Mr. K. G. Phillips.

February, 1936, brought us together as the Junior Class of South High School. We then selected our sponsor, Miss Edna Higgins, and elected our officers: Lucile Wyatt, president; Ed Mendenhall, vice-president; Helen Swaim, secretary; and J. E. Tate, treasurer. Our outstanding social event of this semester was the Junior-Senior Banquet, where we featured a genuine "wah-hoo" orchestra. We especially enjoyed this because we earned most of the expenses by selling candy at our basketball games.

September of 1936 brought us together, we thought, as "the" Senior Class of South High School. But misfortune laughed at us again. There were so many of us that we could not get into one room. Therefore we divided and selected two sponsors: Miss Eleanor Cain and Miss Margaret McLean. Our officers were elected in due time: Roy Bovender, president; Ralph Leonard, vice president; Lucile Wyatt, secretary. As our president could not be in both home rooms at one time, we elected two chairmen: J. E. Tate and Ed Mendenhall of Miss Cain's and Miss McLean's rooms respectively. We liked these fine officers so much that we decided to keep them for both semesters.

During that year our social life was by no means neglected. The two most outstanding events were the Masquerade Party and the Junior-Senior Banquet. We really enjoyed the latter because of what it meant to us.

We were greatly pleased at the beginning of the second semester because we were permitted to have the library for our home room. As Miss McLean found it necessary to leave, we selected Mrs. Lucia Blackwood to take her place.

When that year came to a close, we had proved what we could do. We had shown our stability to Miss Stephenson through M. O. S.; Miss Glasgow made us observers of America each Friday through the "American Observer".

PROPHECY OF JUNE CLASS

Lois Zimmerman, Prophet

It has been said that if you stand on Times Square, you will eventually see someone you know. As I am an inquisitive and doubtful person, I one day in the spring of 1947, endeavored to visit Times Square and prove or disprove this statement.

I had stood on the corner for sixty seconds when I felt a hearty slap on the back. Turning, I found Hoyle Mann—most recent explanations “why women’s hearts beat faster.” It seems that Hoyle is in New York on a visit before appearing in “Love and Learn” with Mary Leonard. Hoyle explained that Annie Jarvis is the author of “Love and Learn”, a best seller.

He gave me the low-down on Reverend Walter Cook who is now in Hollywood trying to convince the actors that his way is best. His wife is Agnes McNair. Norma Minish, Nancy Fisher, and Ruth Hege are members of Brother and Sister Cook’s choir.

Soon Ed Mendenhall and Rose Wood came by. Naturally, Ed hollers, “Hey” and stops to tell of his job as publicity manager for the Paradise Cafe where Rose sings. He tells of celebrities who visit there, such as LeRoy Peebles, manager of Hi-De-Ho Revue; W. J. Dillon, his star juggler; Ethel Wooten, owner of The Swank, New York’s best dress shop. As he kept talking to me, I heard from almost everyone in my senior graduating class of 1937.

Charles Simmons and Farris Eddinger invented a weight reducer. The slim and lovely Josephine Kreegar is proof of its success.

Ralph Leonard is the leader and “Grandpa” of a Hill-billy Band. “Arizona Al (Everette Charles), “Montana Mont” (Cecil Stewart), and “Wyoming Will” (Hubert Weir) are his helpers.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Tate (Margaret Bauguss) are members of Chicago’s smart young set. Mr. Tate holds a position in the First National Bank. His secretary is Miss Margaret Smith.

In Detroit, we find Mr. and Mrs. David Doty. David is a star football player with the Detroit Tigers. Mrs. Doty (Alice Johnson) is his manager and says, “We won’t play for less than $25,000 a year.” C. E. Gordon and Ernest Shore are also playing with the Tigers.

Back in New York, we find Rosa Speaks, Mildred Hedgecock, and Mary Frances Wooten modeling latest fashions in women’s clothes.

In their home city (Winston-Salem), we find Lucille Wyatt and Helen Swaim teaching young citizens that one and one equals four. They visit Gladys Brown at her modernistic beauty shop often.

If you desire a house you’d probably go to Collins Real Estate Agency where Mr. W. A. Collins, Jr. will satisfy you with the aid of Evelyn Tillmon, his assistant.

Jack Simmons has at last “stooped and conquered.” He is a farmer and wins many prizes with his large, perfectly formed squashes. His competitor for awards is Grady Zimmerman.

Roy Bovender and Randall Manning are salesmen for the Windsor Candy Company.

In Washington, D. C. we find Irene Edman as a dignified Senatoress from North Carolina.

Corrie Ferguson and Mildred Floyd are typists in the government offices there.

William Bowers announces programs over W X Z, Charlotte, North Carolina.

Across the Atlantic, is Clois Renigar singing over a London Broadcasting Station; Lucy Lee Joyce and Nancy Davis are globe trotters.

In China, you’ll find John Crouch telling American citizens there what happen-

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF JUNE CLASS, 1937

Section I

We, the June graduating class of nineteen hundred and thirty-seven, knowing that our life as a class will soon cease, and wishing to express our appreciation to those who have labored with us so diligently, and who have been associated with us daily, do hereby will and bequeath our treasures, and privileges, to wit.

Section II

Item I. To Mr. Phillips and Miss Hall, we wish to express our appreciation for their sympathetic understanding of our difficult problems.

Item II. To the Juniors, we will the honor of being dignified during their final year and the front seats in assembly.

Item III. To the student body, we leave honored traditions, such as athletics, various societies, and the journalistic, public speaking, and dramatic activities, and the art of studying in general.

Item IV. To our beloved sponsors, Miss Eleanor Cain and Miss Margaret McLean, our admiration and friendship. It is with profound sorrow that we must be separated.

Section III

Item I. To the Faculty, we leave our sincere gratitude for their efforts in attempting to increase our wisdom.

Item II. To Miss Moselle Stephenson, a life size portrait of English writers from Anglo-Norman period through the age of Queen Victoria in the hope that they will haunt her as they have haunted us.

Item III. To Miss Hazel Baity, a model set of pupils for her library periods.

Item V. To Miss Clara Tiller, an equipped auditorium where her dramatic classes may rehearse.

Item V. To Mr. Bunn, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Griffith, our sincere hope that their teams will slaughter North.

Item VI. To Miss Daisy Lee Glasgow, a southern plantation near the city of Atlanta.

Section IV

Item I. To Dort Payne, we bequeath William Bowers' ability to argue, which always has the power to infuriate his teachers and get their minds off the lesson.

Item II. To Raymond Wood, Everette Charles leaves his scholarly ability, in hope that Raymond will pass one subject.

Item III. To Jane Sink, Josephine Kreegar leaves her plumpness and size, pointing out the fact that it takes a person of this caliber to be "Best-all-around."

Item IV. To Francine Carter, Edwin Mendenhall leaves a reasonable exact facsimile of his red hair and the distinguished and outstanding qualities he has.

Item V. To Doris Bell, Rose Wood leaves her title of the biggest flirt.

Item VI. To Kathryn Mendenhall, Ruth Hege leaves her Latin book in hopes that Kathryn will learn something other than "Ego amo te."

Item VII. To Jesse Trevathan, Hoyle Mann wills his "good looks."

Item VIII. To all future class presidents, Roy Bovender leaves his ability to solve class problems successfully.

Item IX. To Virgie Flowers, Lois Zimmerman wills her journalistic abilities.

Item X. To Janice Garwood, Nancy Fisher leaves her (strong) body and athletic tendencies.

Item XI. To Billy Hunter, Swanson Roberts leaves his height.

Item XII. To the football team, we will Roy Bovender's, David Doty's, Hoyle Mann's, Ernest Shore's, and Bill Trevathan's that last one yard which is hard to get.

CLASS POEM

Our life is a book, and only we
Have power to write therein.
The days we live are its pages;
Our character—the pen.
The cover bound about it is made
By God's own hand.
We're placed upon the shelf of life
To await His command.
And when our book is opened
What will the reader see?
A life of service, faith and love?
Or will the answer be,
"The writing here is not very clear;
I see no good at all."
The book is closed, the reader gone,
You're placed against the wall.
Yes, the reader's gone. He travels on
To find books more worthwhile,
No time for you, whose pages few
Are unclean, blotted, vile.
The book he seeks is rich and full.
No scantiness, no scrawl,
One which remains unblemished
The masterpiece of all.
So, Graduates, may we make our book
One to be much read,
One whose pages we'll open wide
Proudly and unafraid.
With our high school days the preface
Of our book comes to an end.
The living chapters, small or great,
In the future must be penned.

SUPERLATIVES OF JANUARY CLASS

IDEAL GIRL

The ideal girl of the Senior Class
 Would include them all it seems
 We'd select the best trait of each lass
 To make up the girl of our dreams.
 From Opal Lancaster we'd take her eyes
 And choose Louise Lineback's hair,
 Jean Simpson's intelligence would make her wise
 And Octa's complexion is fair.
 Estelle Kimel could donate her ready wit,
 We'd get teeth from Alma Brooks
 And Alma's figure would make a hit
 Even in the movie books.

IDEAL BOY

The ideal boy, on the other hand
 Would have eyes like M. B. Byrd
 As for wit, we'd choose "Red" Manuel's brand
 As about the best that we've heard
 From C. F. Cooke we'd select the physique
 And from M. B., intelligence.
 The hair of Bill Knott would best suit our sheik
 While C. F.'s teeth have most brilliance,
 "Red's" disposition would complete the list,
 Plus Bill Knott's versatility
 Such a composite boy we couldn't resist
 With this character and this ability.

HISTORY OF NORTH CAROLINA HIGH SCHOOLS

Octa Cook, Historian

Since this is the hundredth anniversary of the public schools of North Carolina, we of North High have chosen the topic "HISTORY OF NORTH CAROLINA SCHOOLS" instead of "HISTORY OF OUR CLASS".

The first form of public education in North Carolina was that provided for the destitute orphans. Various citizens promised to take orphans and teach them a trade and to read and write along with other children in the family.

In 1776 the first free school was established in Newbern. It was financed by a one cent tax on each gallon of rum carried up the Neuse River.

Although the original Constitution of 1776 had made it possible through the legislature to establish schools, nothing was done until 1825 when the act creating the Literary Fund was passed. The principal support was a combination of local taxation and income from the Literary Fund.

In 1850 Calvin H. Wiley introduced into the House of Commons a bill to provide for the appointment of a Superintendent of Common Schools. In 1852, Wiley was appointed the first Superintendent of Common Schools.

Wiley's task as the first superintendent was not easy. In spite of all the difficulties, Calvin H. Wiley went forward and out of apparent chaos built the foundation of the present education system in North Carolina.

Probably no better view of the educational status at the inception of the state school system is given anywhere than that presented by Wiley in his first annual report in 1853.

The children of all grades and classes, in Wiley's day, were all together in one class. The teacher taught the children out of any books they had. Wiley did not like this idea so he wrote a book for the children. The children were put into classes after this book was written.

Wiley wished to establish a school in each section of the country. The people who had been sending their children to boarding school gave money to these public schools. By this method all the children in that section of the country were able to go to school.

Although the statistical data contained in this first State Superintendent's report are very meagre compared to a report of the present Superintendent of Public Instruction, it does show certain interesting facts concerning the progress of schools and education in the state.

In 1840, there were 2 colleges and universities, 141 academies, and 14,937 other schools. There were 56,609 whites over 20 years of age who could not read and write.

In 1850, the enrollment had increased greatly; there were 100,591 children enrolled in the common schools. The report of 1853 showed 177,629 children had enrolled in 70 counties, and 85,322 children taught. The average salary per month was from $9 to $36, and very few of the teachers were properly licensed.

Many serious difficulties had been encountered, and notwithstanding these, and notwithstanding the imperfect organization of the system, and a partial neglect of the State, the schools have made a continued though slow progress.

The following paragraph might well be said today; it would be just as applicable as it must have been when Wiley was superintendent:

"Our position is not high, but in no country on earth can greater industrial, commercial, and educational progress be made in the next years than it is in our power easily to accomplish for North Carolina."

PROPHECY OF JANUARY CLASS, 1937

Jean Simpson

The scene is the colossal, magnificent, stupendous, gigantic World's Fair in New York city, and the time, a few years after the present.

Amid the noise that always issues from a Fair midway, we find cautiously walking along, stopping every few minutes, and peering about, Mrs. David Lanier, formerly Miss Estelle Kimel, who seems to have lost Mr. Lanier some way or other. As she looks about she sees walking along a very quaint figure—quaint in that she is walking slowly as if in a daze. Estelle recognizes her as Louise Lineback. Louise, it seems, has become a very famous poet and is composing a poem about the glamour of the midway.

As they stand talking they look up at a ferris wheel and see on the very top seat Jean Simpson with a spy glass—of all things—to her eyes. She's standing upright in her seat. "Whoops!" Louise and Estelle both exclaim, "She's lost her balance, she is falling. No, she caught herself." The ride stops and Jean comes toward them. "Well, well, well!" she exclaims, "fancy meeting you here—I'd love to talk but you see I have to make a deadline at twelve and its nine now—let's see, oh, yes—You see I'm a columnist and you just get oodles of things here and I've just got to rush. So long!" And off she dashes leaving two breathless persons behind.

And just then there comes into sight a Paris poodle dog, followed by a long chain attached to—of all people—Alma Brooks.

"Girls," she says, "I'm delighted to see you. How do you like Gertie? I picked him up on one of my trips abroad. You see I'm very fond of travel."

The three friends, deciding to see something, together, enter a huge tent. In the middle of the ring, clad in a scarlet, blue, orange, and green suit is Wilburn Manuel, the most famous clown of the century.

Looking around the ring they see Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Cooke. Mrs. Cooke is raising a racket that is drowning out all the other noises in the tent. Mr. Cooke is looking about very sheepishly. Louise Alma, and Estelle hold their sides and exclaim, "A perfect hen-pecked husband."

Leaving the tent, they run into Opal Lancaster. Opal is a picture out of a fashion magazine. She tells them she is a fashion expert in a store and gives the name of Saks on Fifth Avenue.

They wander on, and who comes into sight but Octa Cooke. Octa has a very business-like look about her, so they are not very much surprised to hear her say she is a secretary, but when she says she's the secretary to the Mayor of New York they fairly gasp for breath.

They enter a huge exhibit hall of a certain tobacco firm and find one of the directors talking about the merits of good tobacco in a cigarette. And who is the director, but Bill Knott. Bill blushed when they asked him how he attained success and said, "I owe it all to my English teacher, Miss Dungan."

Hearing an exciting commotion, they rush to see what has occurred. They find a group of female fans grouped about Romeo M. B. Byrd, the idol of the silver screen. M. B. waves a wan hand of salute as he is fairly borne down the lane by avid autograph-hunters.

Just then Mr. Lanier rushes up and Estelle gives him one of those wifey stares which mean, "Just wait 'till I get you home," and the friends part and go their respective ways.

The stars twinkle in the same way, calm and undisturbed, as if this famous meeting had never occurred—as indeed it may never!

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT JANUARY CLASS 1937

Bill Knott

We, the members of the January, 1937, graduating class of North High, being of strong minds and character, having been strengthened by our absolute knowledge of history, do hereby publish our last will and testament:

Article I

To members of the faculty we express our sincere thanks for patience in helping us during our stay at North High, and we do graciously forgive them for the headaches and homework they have given us.

Article II

To the class of June, 1937, we leave our athletic ability which was the backbone of our noble class.

Article III

We give and bequeath to our respected and beloved principal a twig of forget-me-nots, so that when teachers are needed, the class of January, 1937 will be remembered.

Article IV

To John Wooten we sadly bequeath that art of talking just as much as Fletcher Fulp, and we trust that John will be excused from just as many classes on account of it.

Article V

To Lillian Currin we will, with keen joy, Red Manuel's penetrating understanding of literature.

Article VI

We will to the entire class of June,

1937, Estelle Kimel's excellent motto: "To ask questions is the way to find out."

Article VII

We leave to M. B. Byrd's desk a long and much needed rest.

Article VIII

We bestow, grant, and convey to Moir Lancaster, C. F. Cook's Dancing Hall, which has been a great asset to him in teaching the "fair ones" the proper way to dance.

Article IX

To the class of June, 1937, we will our senior dignity. May they wear it well!

Article X

We joyfully will and bequeath to the class of June, 1937, all of our dear faculty who will always cherish fond memories of us, and we sincerely believe that they will change their disposition for the better toward the next senior class.

We hereby constitute and appoint the Golden Dragon of North High sole executor of this our last will and testament made under our hand and seal, this the 19th day of November in the year 1937 in the city of Winston-Salem, N. C., in the County of Forsyth.

Ever Onward! This our motto.
With hearts flung in hope and expectation
Undaunted spirits soar in exaltation
As we cry, "Ever Onward!"

Ever Onward! This our motto.
Each classmate impelled by will to overcome
Youthful purpose conquers when 'tis venturesome
So we strive Ever Onward.

Ever Onward! This our motto.
Each resolves a higher goal is yet to be achieved
And rewards by brave and happy hearts to be received
As we press Ever Onward.

Ever Onward! This our motto.
Reluctantly, North High, we bid farewell to thee
Yet offer you our praise and thanks eternally
As we move Ever Onward.

HISTORY OF JUNE CLASS, 1937

Lawrence Highfill

In the ninth moon of the year 1933 a flock of young red-skins began a series of battles which were to last four long, but glorious years. The event was not as colorful as it might have been because our North High tribe was very young, and we were in need of warriors. So, earlier than is customary, we were allowed to associate with the older members of our tribe and began training for the battles in which we were to participate in the near future.

Yes, at last we had the opportunity to become heroes in warfare. Upon reaching this stage we were fortunate in not being looked down on as most freshmen are, because others not so far advanced as we, were present to receive the abuse and intolerance usually suffered by the freshmen.

Although we weren't thrust onto the warpath in that first year, valuable knowledge was stored away for future use.

The dull winter and bright spring of the second year faded into the past and we were recognized with a little more respect. It was in this year that Mr. R. S. Haltiwanger was made chief of the tribe, to lead us along the trails of learning.

In the third year of our career we selected Raymond Holder as leader of our rising-in-fame bloody division of the North High Indians. Our struggle in the massacres of Typing and Shorthand are very distinctly remembered by those taking part as highlights in the Junior year. However, several triumphants returned to camp after the Battle of Typing with 50 words a minute swinging on their belts—victims of skillful use of the scalping knife.

Being unable to prevent the progress of time, we found our fourth year, known as the senior year, become a reality. Mr. R. A. Swaringen was given our division, to guide and direct our actions, and again Big Chief Raymond Holder was chosen our active leader.

Our continual advance reached its peak and we furnished a rightful majority of the tribe's leading figures. Faithfully, we upheld the tradition of seniors to be dignified and all-commanding. At times we probably defined too radically senior privileges. Nevertheless we met the increased responsibilities with all energy and competence of famed Indians on the warpath. The social climax of the year was the delightful Junior-Senior. Not in the entire History of American Indians is there an account of so many and such beautifully attired squaws as were assembled at this occasion.

Perhaps the most famous and bitter battle during this term was the Battle of American History on the Diploma River. Many bear scars of this battle, which will be long remembered and cherished, as precious jewels of knowledge. It almost made pale faces of us all.

Some of those attaining especial fame in active warfare were: Frances Newsom, editor of Pine Whispers and President of National Honor Society; Raymond Holder, captain of 1936-37 basketball team; Moir Lancaster, captain of 1935-36 football team; and Gray Shermer, mayor during the 1936-37 school term.

Not at all unboastfully, we wish to express our extreme sympathy for our fair tribe after we are gone. But oh, we forgot; our superb knowledge and ability were received through the excellent training of dear old Alma Mater; our teachers, the medicine men; and the beneficence of the Great Spirit.

PROPHECY OF JUNE CLASS, 1937

David West

It is 1950 and the annual meeting of the Merchants' Association is being held in the ball room of the Robert E. Lee Hotel. As we look around the room, we find a number of prominent business men. The first one we notice is Gray Shermer smoking his "left over" campaign cigar. As our eyes wander around we see Raymond Holder, the carpenter representative, seated in a very beautiful chair. The new mayor of our fair city slaps Raymond on the shoulder.

"Well, if it isn't 'Stink' Holder. What are you doing here?"

"Why, haven't you heard," laughs Raymond, "that North High has eighteen representatives present at our meeting?"

"Now let me see," studies Gray, "if I can remember any of my old class mates. There's Moir Lancaster, the groceryman, J. D. Allgood, owner of Kress department store, J. T. Tilley, bookkeeper for Hollywood's leading cowboy—Buck Jones, and Melvin Fogg, clown at the State Theatre."

"That seems to be all I can remember right now. Do you remember any, Stink?"

"Well, now let me see," replies Stink. "There's Grace Darden, author of 'Gone With The School,' and Lawrence Highfill, the shoeman who seems to be having trouble in finding shoes that fit his feet."

"Say, Stink, don't you remember Frances Newsom's ability for acting? Well, she's a chorus girl at the new theatre—The Liberty Street Opera House. And, by the way, what's become of Doris Tucker? I heard that she and Moir Lancaster were married. Do you suppose they are getting along okay? Doris Holden is also on the screen—don't you remember she got her training proposing to the North High boys? And Paul Cheek has gone into the tailoring business so he can make a pair of pants to fit himself."

"The other day I was walking down the street, when I happened to look inside a dog-pawn shop, and what do you think I saw?" replied Gray as he puffs harmoniously on his cigar. "I saw David West washing away on a big, German police dog. Seated at a big, mahogany desk, I saw Ruth Landingham, checking the dogs, as Clarice Bruce, the dogcatcher, brought them in."

"Why, that's nothing," yawns Raymond, as he stretches his long legs, "the other day I was sitting in my office, working over my carpenter contracts, when Margaret O'Neal came in looking for a job. Of course, I would like to have given her one, but I am not getting regular work, and I can hardly afford to have a secretary and pay her four or five dollars a week. That's not even enough money to keep up Lawrence Highfill and his wife, Mary Bennett, who are trying to live on love."

Throwing away his short cigar stub, and lighting another, Gray leans back in his chair, and throws his legs up on the radiator.

"That about covers our whole class, except a few more, whose names I can't remember."

Looking directly in front of him, Gray sees a familiar looking person trying to get his attention. While speaking to Raymond, he accidentally looks up to see the big eyes of Paul Cheek, the tailor.

"Well, look who it is!"

"Come here, Stink, I want you to meet one of our old classmates, Paul Cheek. Paul, we have been discussing our old class mates. Do you remember any?"

Paul takes a seat that Stink has politely offered and begins telling all he knows about the remainder of the class.

"The last information I have on Sara Barrett is that she is still trying to date Robert Taylor, and our friends, Marie

We thank the faculty for all the interest they have shown in us during our school days.

Article II

To Mr. Swaringen, we wish to say that we especially appreciate all he did for us during our senior year and graduation.

Article III

Our principal, Mr. Haltiwanger, we are grateful to for his kindness and interest in us during our last school years.

Section II: Article I

To Mr. Swaringen, our homeroom teacher, we leave the seniors of next year, and we hope they don't have as many places to go during homeroom period as we had.

Article II

Our knowledge of English literature we leave to Miss Dungan to pass on to students who need it in future years.

Article III

The faculty, we forgive for giving us so much homework, and we leave to them many years of sending as successful classes as ours into the world.

Section III: Article I

To the seniors of next year we leave our American History books and we sincerely hope that they will like it as well as we did and have as hard time learning it as we did.

Article II

Frances Newsom and Lawrence Highfill leave their intellectual ability to be used for the good of the school, because we don't know anyone who really needs it.

Article III

Raymond Holder leaves his flirting ability to Ed Clarke. With that new car and Raymond's ability, will Ed rate?

Article IV

Ruth Landingham leaves her flirting ability to Dot Darnell. Watch out, girls.

Article V

To F. L. Wooten, David West leaves his good disposition. We want to see you smile more, F. L.

Article VI

Doris Holden leaves her singing ability to Dewey Pegram. We expect to hear you on the radio, Dewey.

Article VII

Gray Shermer leaves his athletic ability to Luther Ray Kiser. We're expecting a good team next year.

Article VIII

Doris Tucker's good looks, she leaves to Louise Barnes. Take good care of them, Louise.

Article IX

Moir Lancaster's good looks, he leaves to J. A. Mock. We want Ed to have some competition, J. A.

Article X

Our school we leave with Mr. Haltiwanger to use for a worthy cause.

Article XI

J. D. always talked so much that we want to leave this ability to Lillian Currin. But don't talk on class, Lillian.

Article XII

The class leaves their love for Byron to Bob Newsom. Will this be enough to make you like him, Bob?

Article XIII

Our senior privileges we leave to the seniors of next year. Especially do we leave the conference room in the library.

Article XIV

Anything that we have lost that can be used (minds, abilities of any kind, offices, etc.), you may look for in the Lost and Found.

JANUARY CLASS POEM

Harry Lee Nunn, Poet

'Neath the tall and stately pine trees,
Large and beautiful, age-old pine trees,
Stands a school, the Reynolds High School,
Great and noble Reynolds High School.
Softly mellowing stands tradition
Stands the brightly shining past
With its thoughts forever upward
Stands a school, a school to last!
'Mid the beauty of surroundings,
'Mid the beauty of the pine trees,
'Mid the splendor of tradition
Dignified and great tradition,
Stands a place of inspiration
Stands a place that does enthrall
Our hearts with great emotion
As we listen to her call.

HISTORY OF JANUARY CLASS OF 1937

Julian Daye, Historian

It was in nineteen hundred and thirty-three—a cold winter—filled with joyous promise—that the good ship Reynolds High School stood at anchor at the wharf of a school year. This ship had carried many passengers to the land of Great Wisdom, but this was a day to be remembered in history. A number of charming young ladies and gentlemen stepped aboard, for they had been told that they were to sail over new waters in quest of The Fountain of Higher Education.

To me was entrusted the important task of writing the log of the voyage—the voyage that all realized was the most important of their lives. My narrative begins with the trip through the Freshman Islands of smaller learning. We chose for the first voyage Howard Sellars captain, who proved his capability of undertaking command.

We cheerfully rolled on waves of Algebra, Latin, and English. There were a few cases of seasickness, but the stewardess assured us that we would have to consume these indigestibles over and over until they were assimilated. Intellectuality was aboard disguised as Rodger Avery, who attained high honors in his studies.

There is little to relate concerning this trip, as we were inexperienced voyagers whose ambition was to complete our tour in style.

In January, 1934, one-fourth of our journey was complete. At the now familiar wharf we reembarked upon the Reynolds High to sail upon the seas to the land of Sophomore.

We encountered typhoons of triangles, tangents, and forty-five degree angles; we were destined to face storms of Latin and English. We sailed bravely on, and only a few met disaster. How proud I was to be chosen captain for this voyage.

Over the four seas, we, the class of 1937, were to sail, we had now steamed over two. New and more delightful experiences were ahead as we greeted our Junior year in January, 1935. The helmsman set his course for the large Junior Peninsula that jutted out from Sophomore Land. From bow to stern, we frolicked about, forgetting all bashfulness that accompanys the lowerclassmen. Whom could we have chosen better to take command than Edward Dize? Possibly the seas inspire music, for Stanley Fishel won his share of honors with his inseparable clarinet. We had become careless in our confidence and were studying with much less vigour than we had as lower-classmen. We had been carefree and gay just as the traditional junior, but in time our instructors warned us that soon we would be seniors and must buckle down to hard and earnest work.

With dignity and pride the Class of 1937 steamed away from the wharf for our last cruise on the Reynolds High. We chose as captain William Murphey. This last stage in our voyage was the most important. We had no time for gayety, for we had all we could do to fulfill our school activities. We began to stand out in the various activities. To athletics we contributed Thompson Woodall, Jim Swaim, George Page, O'Dell Childress, James Phillips, Dunn Midyette, and Edward Dize. Carl Dixon was chosen captain of the 1936 State Champion Tennis Team of Reynolds High. Records from my log of the cruise show Ruth Hauser and Harry Nunn to be most intellectual of the voyagers.

The end of this year brings to a close four happy years of educational voyaging and beginning of the Voyage of Real Life that all must some day embark upon. We have stood together through storms and gales, and not once did we give up the ship. The tides of our voyage have

CLASS PROPHECY OF JANUARY, 1937

Phil Froelich, Prophet

Wandering aimlessly down the street one afternoon recently, I busied my mind with thoughts of my past life, and particularly, about the people I had once known. Where were my classmates from High School, for instance? What could have happened to them? How strange it seemed that in the short twenty-three years since we were all seniors in Reynolds High School so many of them had completely disappeared and I knew nothing of them. I mentally resolved to find out about them, sometime and somehow—and then let myself drift off lazily into other thoughts without any plans in mind.

Being naturally of an easy-going temperament, I am not usually surprised, but I was somewhat startled when a package suddenly dropped out of the ether at my feet, rudely interrupting my reminiscences. The package was torn and dirty, but when I examined it, I discovered it was a newspaper—a kind I had never seen before, "Twin City Advertiser." Perhaps it was the new paper which had been rumored about Winston-Salem for some time, I thought, until I noticed the date—January 30, 1960. Then I knew it to be a revelation of the future; where it came from and what it meant I could not fathom, but I hastened to read it, feeling sure that it would contain some news of my long lost friends.

On the second page I found an article headed "Peace Necessary To Mankind" dated from London, England, written by the famous reporter, Alex Nading. Another item was headed "World Traveler Presents Colorful Travelogue," and, strangely enough, the traveler was James Phillips. On the editorial page was an article written by Julian Daye, editor of the "Twin City Advertiser."

In the personal column the following articles: "Woodrow Jarvis and cousin, Virginia, are leaving tomorrow for New York, where they will begin a round-the-world flight in a new type speed plane." "Miss Carol Davis will leave tomorrow for Miami, Florida, where she will spend the remaining winter months competing in the National Amateur Golf and Tennis Matches." "Miss Virginia Nading, secretary to the President, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nading, of this city."

One advertisement on the same page caught my eye: "Be Well Groomed—J. F. Braswell Barber Shop." Another advertisement read: "Morris Service—Owned and Operated by Wm. Murphey."

On the society page I found some interesting news: "Mr. Joel Merrit to be speaker at Rotarian Banquet." "Miss Hazel Creson, only woman member of Congress, to visit city." "Miss Frances Anderson, world champion woman 500-meter swimmer, returns after competing in the Olympic games in Geneva, Switzerland."

At the bottom of the page I found a comic strip drawn by Bill King, a resume of 1959 highlights, by Roxie Rothrock, news analyst, and a poem by Edward Jurney.

On the last page were stock quotations by the brokerage firm of Hoots, Childress, and Boger. Also there was an estimate of an estate by the law firm of Page, Dixon, and Dize.

I read "Examinations End At Reynolds High School," an announcement made by the principal, John Davis. At the bottom of the page I noticed this advertisement: "Buy your pencils, paper, notebooks, etc., etc., etc., from a reliable concern, K. M. Cashion and Company."

On the sports page I found this story: "Coach Jim Swaim's Lavender Wave of Arkansas University Defeats Yale!" Also on this page was the item: "Coach Midyette of Notre Dame Ousted by Officials."

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF JANUARY CLASS

Zeno Hoots

We, the January class of 1937, being possessed of a somewhat limited estate, desiring greatly to show our appreciation to those who have aided and been friends to us and realizing it more blessed to give than to receive, not grudgingly or of necessity, do solemnly dispose of the following of our possessions:

Article I

Item I: To Mr. Joyner and the faculty we do express our sincere appreciation for their patient, diligent, and ceaseless efforts in our behalf.

Item II: To the 11B class and the seniors yet to come we leave the thrill of graduating and the privilege of being honored guests at the Junior-Senior. We regret to say that these are the only remaining remnants of the many senior privileges.

Item III: To Miss Nicholson and Miss Flynn, the Librarians, we render our heartfelt thanks for aid given us in our reference work and especially for their many efforts to find us small books with large print.

Item IV: We do cheerfully leave to the faithful janitors the long awaiting privileges of picking up our exam papers.

Article II

Item I: We gladly leave 100 pounds of Dunn Midyette to Walter Curley. We feel this would materially improve Walter's excellent athletic ability which we hope will enable the football team to win the state championship in 1940.

Item II: To Mack Alspaugh, Harry Lee Nunn hands down his dramatic ability. Incidentally Mack will inherit Harry Lee's handsomeness which has been such a decided factor in his success in dramatics.

Item III: James Swaim leaves to Jack

Brown his beautiful, golden brown hair.

Item IV: Carl Dixson gladly leaves to Sam Smith his good looks; his famous, cunning smile, however, he steadfastly refuses to part with.

Item V: The Siamese Twins are represented in our class in the personages of Nell Ferebee and Virginia Nading. We leave this sincere friendship and seats by each other in the class room to Kathleen Murray and Edna Thomas, hoping that one will never be seen without the other.

Item VI: We are happy to hand down Phil Froelich's wonderful gift of gab to one Clay Shields, who, we are sure, will put it to many and varied uses.

Item VII: Ruth Hauser leaves to John Peddycord her superb intellectual power. This gift is sympathetically made in response to John's need of such.

Article III

Lastly after a special conference with Miss Heilig we leave to all future class day officers a liberal portion of our originality; they may be assured this will prove most valuable in satisfactorily arranging their class history, prophecy, poem, and will.

We do hereby appoint our mutual friend and history model, Miss Margaret Lumpkin, as sole executrix of this our last will and testament.

In witness whereof we have set our hand and seal, this, the 28th day of January, Anno Domini, Nineteen Hundred Thirty-seven.

Respectfully submitted
Zeno Hoots, Testator

Witnesses:

Governor Alf Landon
Dr. Samuel Johnson
Daniel Boone

JUNE CLASS POEM

Lawson Withers, Poet

As we wander through life's halls,
suddenly we reach a gate;
Out it leads, on by the walls that for years have kept us one—
one great body full of fun,
jealousy, sorrow, joy and hate.
Out we pass; we know not where.

Under all this sham of laughter,
anxious thoughts disturb our mind.
Unemployment! Shame! Disaster!
What chance have we to survive?
Do not make us pass the gate!

Someone has said that it is best to know not what the future holds,
But pleasant pasts are as a guest—ever enjoyed, but forever gone.

Then courage—Things are never as dark as painted.
So let's accept the new adventure with a spirit by fear not tainted, but confident of success and pleasure.
We must leave the four, short years.
They were great, but they are past.

HISTORY OF JUNE CLASS, 1937

As we near the close of our four years in high school, the words of the old song:

"Along the River of Time we glide,
The swiftly flowing resistless tide."
brings to our minds the thought that in many ways our Class of 1937 is like a river rolling through the country of high school, not a mighty river, as Carlyle designates the Shakespeares and Miltons in the country of Thought, but a modest stream doing its best to enrich student life.

As a tiny rivulet, its springs deep in the soil of primary and grammar schools, we as a freshman class found our course headed toward the borderlands of the Richard J. Reynolds field of endeavor. Coming as we did from various schools, we were indeed as "a babbling brook from a thousand different sources."

Joyously we rushed on our way through our first year in high school land, gaining volume and strength as the days sped by. Sometimes we found the banks high that enclosed us—rules and regulations of Student Council, stricter grading of papers than we had been accustomed to, daily testings and drills; sometimes we found our way choked by weeds of ignorance of high school ways; time and again the rocks of English grammar, Latin infinitives, originals in algebra threatened to impede our way; but, like Tennyson's brook, going on forever, widening here, narrowing there, we came at length to the vale of Sophomore days.

Crowded in as we were between the high hills of Freshman sauciness and Junior assurance, we found our way difficult indeed and slow of progress.

From our entrance upon high school territory having carried our share of the small boats of student activities, during our second year we were proud to display upon the bosom of our sophomore river a greater variety of craft—more active participation in Council and

House, wider range of club interests, athletics, introduction into the delights of band, play-acting, and debating.

By the time our course had rounded into Junior channels, the influence of our river of learning was beginning to be felt in all the surrounding fields of high school life; the eager freshmen came to sip of our sparkling waters of information; the sophomores deigned to take notice of the varied and valued cargoes displayed on our small crafts: high speed in typing, prizes in journalistic work, athletic starr-ing; even the lofty seniors occasionally strolled down to our flowering banks.

Through the devious windings of our freshman, sophomore and junior years, one clear song our river sang: "ON! ON! to the wide meadows of senior privileges!" And high above the other voices sounded the glad notes of our thrice-chosen leader, Charles Martin.

At length, into the deeper channel of senior year swept our sparkling river. On either side stretched the broad meadows of influence, "watered by a thousand shining rills." Crowned with garlands of praise, senior crafts plied up and down our broad river—crafts of publications, piloted by Lawson Withers, Sam Smith, Mildred Davis, Peggy Dean, Paul Early; of sports, bearing the banners of Bill Vogler, Steve Forrest, Christian Siewers, Leonard Darnell, Rosemary Cody, Mildred Swain, Elizabeth Carroll; of Dramatics starred by Bob Cohn and Margaret Simpson. Amidst busy crafts bearing daily lessons, senior responsibilities, grind on the athletic field, in the debating hall, and behind the foot-lights of the auditorium, lighter skiffs carried cargoes on Junior-Senior dance, picnics, picture-takings, National Honor Society Initiation.

"But the river has its end
When it meets the ocean's tide,"

PROPHECY OF JUNE CLASS

It did not seem like a dream, neither did it appear as a mirage or an hallucination; but then there's a possibility that it was, for my guide and I had been travelling continually for nine days in the vast waste and stabbing colds of the Gobi desert in inner Mongolia. I was on a scouting trip for Lord Henry Buncombe-Powell who was to establish a base camp at a favorable location and then work out from it in his archaeological surveys. As yet we had not found a centrally located situation nor a favorable one. Lord Henry was a flighty old buzzard and would have stopped at nothing—not even my head. Woe unto me if the camp were not precisely as he wished it to be! But to my story . . . .

Suddenly I saw upon the cheerless horizon a dense line of softly moving objects, appearing almost as swirling clouds of dust raised by some huge legion of horses, guns, and men. As my guide and I drew nearer, objects took shape—human beings, each at some particular work! I prodded my ragged little pony nearer. Ah, yes, they were people!

"Look! Look there!" I screeched to my guide. "Do you see anything?"

He turned, stared at me from those lean, immobile, almond eyes of his and replied. "No, master. See nothing."

I drew my hand across my eyes, and when I withdrew it, that . . . that—I knew not what to call it—was still there. And this time I recognized these persons as persons whom I had once known, as persons whom I knew in high school!

Side by side in endless line they stretched into the air, steel-like air, smacking of snow and dreary cold. I only recall a few as my memory delights in playing pranks on my brain. We stopped our ponies. I gaped.

There was Christian Siewers, massive but business-like, thumbing through a hoard of papers—big executive personified, president of Siewers Amalgamated Steel Inc., according to a bronze plaque on the lavish desk. His office was all draperies, deep carpets, and gleaming furniture.

Clad in a bathing suit of sky, clear blue was "Miss America of 1941" Rosemary Cody, now probably a career-woman in modeling.

I "oh-ed" and "ah-ed," and gasped. My guide was completely bewildered. He muttered a word that meant "ghost" and was silent.

And then, attired in all the regalia of his office—derby, cigar, flaming tie, diamonds—was Lawson Withers, political boss. Quite a character, He—Lawson Withers.

Lucy Mae Reavis, the toast of R. J. R. in her day, now seemed satisfied to be a home-body and look after the kiddies. As I saw her she was bustling about a tiny kitchen, without doubt, preparing lunch for hubby-dear. Home! oh sweet, sweet home!

And who should be next but Dick Cobb, Tom Edwards, Charles Martin, and Bill Vogler in a pose from their latest movie "Why Do People Call Me Handsome?" or was it "A Symphony in Masculine Beauty"? I do not remember.

Then, with a gulp, I saw Sue Forrest, Madeleine Hayes, Dorothy Sink, Martha Johnston, and Catherine Harrell, still together, mind you. It seemed that they were the backbone of the Society for the Prevention of Hot Radio Music.

Before a microphone lounged Samuel X. Smith, Mr. X to you and to feminine hearts all over America who, by the way, had fallen in love with his ultra-ultra magnificent visage and voice, now master of ceremonies on the program advertising Nelson-Emerson—Libby and Sallie, you know—Neurotic Pink Liver Pills for the liver.

Robed in leopard skins and fierce knives were Steve Forrest, Bill Sprunt, Jack Brown, Jim Gray, Ray Proctor, John Prevost, Wilfred Hahn, Clay Shields,

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT JUNE CLASS REYNOLDS HIGH

We, the senior class of the Richard Joshua Reynolds High School of this City of Winston-Salem, County of Forsyth, and State of North Carolina, being of sound mind and disposing memory, do hereby make, publish, and declare this our last will and testament, hereby revoking all former wills, bequests, and devices of whatever nature by us made.

Item I: That Claude R. Joyner be the sole executor, and no bonds exacted.

In the beginning, we bequeath our good-will and loyalty to this school.

Item II: To the Junior Class we bequeath the honor of being seniors, and, in fact, all of our rights, privileges, and notoriety which we have won legally or illegally. We further will them the superfluous amount of dignity and reservation, common to seniors, and also the front seats in the chapel rightfully belonging to us, and the privilege of marching out first.

Item III: To the Sophomore Class we bequeath the right to violate deliberately any rule of precedent conflicting with their pleasure, will, or desire. We also will them the right to dictate what shall or shall not be, and to be consulted on any question of importance or vital interest, knowing that they constitute a walking encyclopedia.

Item IV: To the Freshman Class we leave nothing, since in their own estimation they know all that is worth knowing and possess all that is worth possessing.

Item V: To the faculty as a whole, we bequeath our undying gratitude and sincere appreciation for their earnest efforts in our behalf.

Item VI: To Mr. Joyner we will a heart full of praise from each member of this graduating class.

Item VII: We wish to leave with Miss Ford and Miss Whitley, our class sponsors, our apologies for causing so much trouble and time, and our appreciation for their helpful suggestions and all-round guidance.

Item VIII: To the school library and librarians we express our gratitude for the better grades made possible by them.

Item IX: To the Band and Mr. Pfohl we leave our thanks for the fine music and prestige to the school that was made possible by them.

Item X: The following students do hereby bequeath some of their prized possessions and personal belongings to lucky undergraduates:

Henry Bahnson wishes to will his mild and timid manners to Jack Davis. Christian Siewers kindly leaves his football jersey to Dan Poe, so Dan won't have to misplace some other person's. Matt Dalton leaves that foolish grin to Wiley Crouse. Joe Belton leaves his lowest golf score to all of next year's golf hopefuls. Mildred Davis wills her ability to be heard to Anne Pepper whom we would like to hear from. Paul Early leaves his long stride to Thorton Rose in order that Thorton may also be able to do a fifty second quarter. Shorty Parish leaves dear old Philbert to Reece Brock. Bob Cohn wills his so called "dramatic ability" to Roy English. Paul Lehman wills his grace and charm to Donald Welfare. Clay Shield leaves his childish antics with Tommy Lawrence. Charles Martin graciously hands his executive ability down to Moyer Hendrix. Sam King leaves his appetite and ability to get always two ice cream servings at all Hi-Y banquets to Jack Troutman. Bill Sprunt leaves his garrulous nature to Leroy Honeycut. Richard Shore leaves his style of wearing knickers to the freshmen. Willie Hahn wills his dual personality to Albert Wilson. Buck Hines leaves his nick name to anyone who proves tough enough to deserve it. J. D.

The vocational education program of the Reynolds High School Print Shop was carried on again this year on a full-time basis. The enrollment was approximately thirty each semester. Shelby Bogger was graduated in January, and A. H.

Kimel, Richard Neely, John Reynolds and Harold Miller will be graduated in June. The night school class in printing was carried on as usual.

Day school pupils received practice and instruction at nine commercial shops that are participating in our vocational program.

Special trips were arranged for day and night school pupils to visit shops of particular interest, including Winston Printing Co., Indera Mills printing department, and Piedmont Engraving Co. of this city, and print shops and other places of interest in Kingsport, Tenn., Raleigh, N. C., and Roanoke, Va.

Seventeen essays were written for the International Printing Ink Corporation's essay contest on "The Use of Color in Printing." The essay by Percy Gibson was judged the best in the local contest and was entered in the national contest where it ranked ninth among the entries from 243 schools. He, and other local contestants, won over $50.00 worth of books as prizes in this contest.

Joe Minor has been chosen to receive the Printers Club award for his outstanding work in the shop this year. The award last year—also won by Minor—was a stainless steel composing stick engraved with name and date.

Publications this year included a newspaper, "The Wiley Post," printed for Wiley School, as well as "Pine Whispers," printed for the three high schools.

This 1937 "Black and Gold," the largest high school annual ever published here, was the sixth to be produced in the high school print shop. With the exception of making the covers and pebbling the inserts every printing and binding operation was done in the shop. Mr. Arnold McCall of the Winston Printing Company was secured for the cylinder press makeready; all other operations were handled by students and instructor. Every student in the shop had a part in the production of the book. The work of Joe Minor and Norman Fulk deserves special mention, but many of the other students did outstanding work.

CHEERLEADERS

ALMA MATER

Her portals tall and wide,
Call us from every side,
Our youthful steps to guide for future days.

Her pleasant paths, her trees,
Whisper courage through the breeze,
Our greatest need she sees,
And leads always.

May we more useful be,
Always our duty see,
Strive on to victory through the golden rule.

May we always aspire
To lift her banner higher
Add to her fame and power,
God bless our school.

Miller and Edith Stack are doing fine
as stenographers.

After telling all he knows, Paul ambles away bidding his two dear friends a fond adieu. The clock in the center of the ballroom strikes twelve. Everyone has gone home except the mayor of the fair city and the carpenter representative. The janitor comes in with his keys to lock up, and a very sorrowful goodnight is said, for both the dear friends are parting—not until tomorrow at

NORTH CAROLINA SCHOOLS

In 1857, study of the Bible was started in schools. Some parents said that they would not buy readers. They said, also that the children could read and study the New Testament.

The schools began to be overcrowded so the legislature passed a law saying that only children between the ages of 6 and 20 could go to school.

A simple incident in the life of Charles Brantly Aycock is worth remembering. One day he stood by his mother as she was asked to put her signature to some paper or document. She hesitated a moment, and then confessed to the magistrate that she could not write. The young boy saw his mother, with embarrassment, make her mark, putting her finger at the tip of the pen stock while her name was written by another. Governor Aycock said in his later years that this incident made him, as a boy resolve that some day, God willing, he would do something for education in North Carolina.

In 1907, the legislature authorized the establishment of rural high schools and appropriated $45,000 annually for their maintenance. In 1915, there was a public high school in every county in North Carolina.

There are now over 4,000 buses which carry 265,000 children to 790 consolidated schools. These buses travel at least 215,000 miles a day.

The average salary of teachers in the public schools of North Carolina is $576 a year.

The per capita cost of each student in the public schools of North Carolina is $28.56.

The teaching load in North Carolina is 33.7 pupils per teacher, the highest in the United States.

"I can't find out where I can write to Reid Holder," Louise complained.

"Why, I'm surprised you haven't heard about Reid Holder. He is part owner of the Buick Company in Detroit, Michigan, and has finally deserted the old T model."

The latter part of my speech, however, fell on deaf ears. She looked up, her eyes widened, and the envelope fell to the floor unheeded.

Louise had fainted.

JANUARY PROPHECY (Continued from page 116)

I also discovered a poem written by Harry Lee Nunn, titled "Education." Mr. B. Thom. Woodall, President of Reynolds Tob. Co. made a statement concerning the rise in the price of chewing tobacco.

More society articles read: "Misses Juanita Brinkley, Adele Cottingham, Emma Gray Davis, and Nancy Gabriel have returned from a tour of the western states." "Misses Ruth Hauser, Nell Ferabee, and Sunshine Dillon are leaving tomorrow for Florida to take a boat for Cuba."

"Miss Barbara Limerick leaves tomorrow for Canada for extensive concert tours." "Misses Myrtle Nichols, Mary Reavis, Elizabeth Richardson, and Mozelle Owens, are entertaining tonight for Miss Annie Pearl Tilley, winner in a National Dramatic Monologue Contest." "Misses Charlotte Tate, Nellie Richardson, and Mary Frances Waller, are the leading players in the Twin City Tennis Tournament."

By reading these items, my curiosity was amply satisfied as to the whereabouts and accomplishments of my High School friends. I still wonder, though, about the "Twin City Advertiser," for I have never heard of it before or since it fell from the sky to my feet. I am grateful to it, however, as the answer to that all important question, "What has become of the class of January, 1937?"

JUNE CLASS PROPHECY

Roger Norman, Hewes Parrish, and Henry Bahnson executing a savage little dance in the middle of a vast stage—chorus boys all.

Next were Helen Sams, Barbara Lasley, Emily Smither, Gretchen Clapp, Mildred Davis, Lillian Alley, and Jean Hodges presiding over a magnificent room of glass and chromium plate, teachers in the charming College for Charming Charmers.

And look!—it was Buck Hines, bowing and scraping, clad in white tie and tails and saying cute things as "Good morning. I thought you'd gone to Europe." He seemed to be a host in a night club, the same night club in which Paul Harper was orchestra leader.

Raising what is commonly called a "hullabaloo" were Donald Perry, Dick Joyce, Bob Cohn, Bill Tudor, Paul Early, Masten Dalton, members of the city Pot Exterminator Brigade. The method they were raising was one of efficiency and finesse—the poor rodents merely seated themselves, then expired. The Brigade was using its renowned voice power.

And then, using his violin bow as a baton, was Sam Barbee, conductor of the Kernersville Killharmonic Symphony Orchestra, featuring Morris Mecum and Mack Alspaugh as soloists.

Striving to catch other familiar faces, I saw them suddenly fade and blend into the desert air—the vision was no more. My guide creaked impatiently in his saddle and mumbled disgustedly. I clucked to my pony. We proceeded on our weary, monotonous way—our weary way in the tiring desert.

Them was the good ole days, you bet.

A hundred years or so back.

Thar warn't no homework then to get,

Cause thar warn't no schools to be at.

An' then the legislature met

An' passed a new school measure.

An education now we get,

"Something we can treasure."

THOSE DEAR OLD DAYS

(Tune: Love's Old Sweet Song)

Once in the dear, dead days beyond recall

When I was a freshman roamin' 'round the hall,

Out of the dreams that rose in happy throng

I found that I was not where I belonged.
And down the hall there came a senior bold

Of whom I asked my whereabouts to be told.

Just a frightened freshman

Knowing not where to go,

And the halls all ringing with people going to and fro.

Still to me at times

Come those old days,

Come those old days.

THE COUNTRY BOY

Hate to be a city boy,
Rather be a hick
'Cause if I had them frills and things,
I sho' would want to kick.
Rather have the country life
Than all the city's airs,
Rather have my natural head
Than all the frizzy hairs.
Rather do the country work,
And have a lot of fun,
Than living in the big old city,
Where you can't even see the sun.
Rather play my anagrams
Than see a pitcher show,
Rather eat the country ham
Than all the city dough.

—Rosemary Nunn

Quality Insurance

Of course, there is such a thing as high quality and low quality insurance—just as there is in every other service or commodity.

The danger, however, lies in the fact that inferior insurance is worse than worthless. It fails at the critical point—the point where you suffer a loss.

When you need protection there is only one kind to buy. That's sure protection. If you will let us consult with you regarding your insurance requirements, you need have no fears on that score. Call 7140.
